

We've chosen to draw a family because we think that guns are everywhere and a family represents well a place where guns shouldn't be, but the Americans have another point of view. Through our three cartoons we show that the number of guns present in the family circle has dramatically increased through ages and in the future it can only be worse. Everybody will have guns because it is so easy to get one.

First in 1950, people were not as armed as they are today. Then in 2000, guns became more and more sophisticated and started spreading especially in America. So what will it be in 2050?
